Andrew Watts - Lime Electrical
 "I was lifting a pump out of a pit using a chain. The lad I was working with gave it a push and the muck -and I mean proper muck- went in my eye! And yes, my name is perfect for my job but my dentist's is better - Mr Smile!"

Scott Durband - SJ Durband Electrical
 "I was changing some equipment in a Turkey factory. It was a slaughterhouse. The motors were covered in it. Ugh."

Craig Foreman - Electrician
 "You might be thinking 'Craig, but you look fine' and I would agree, however this was taken at the start of day, once finished it was all down my arm and on the tools, helmet you name it. I was covered in what only can be described as thick tar."

David Floyd
 "I'm a chippy and an electrical engineer and I used to build boats. I'd get filthy cleaning and maintaining the engines. The grimmest I ever got was when I fell in the water!"

THIS MONTH'S GRIMIEST ELECTRICIAN!
Dean Cook - DC Electrical
 "I was installing some down lights, and had to access a very small loft space, it was one of the hottest days of the year just the job with a 100 years of soot to crawl through, my mates saw the funny side though!"
